Preventing Family Drama After a Loved One Dies

When a family member is dying, everyone is under stress, but the sadness of the event is sometimes complicated when family members engage in disagreement and persist in being critical of one another. Beyond strained relationships, sometimes the behavior of family members rises to the level of criminality. Attend this workshop to discuss the period immediately before, during and after a loved one's death, and how to manage the family drama that may occur.

The Presenter

Rita Rizzo, MSc.

*Rita Rizzo is the Principal of Rizzo & Associates, LLC, an Ohio based consulting and training firm established in 1984. She holds a Master's Degree in Training and Human Resource Management from the University of Leicester in Leicester, England, and received her undergraduate education in the fields of psychology and nursing. Rita is the author of the book The Culture of Generational Poverty; Providing Meaningful Help to the Impoverished (2009), and co-author of the books Workplace Violence: A Seven Step Process to Address and Manage Potentially Violent Situations in the Workplace (2010), and Health Mind Body Soul (2012). Ms. Rizzo presents approximately 250 workshops annually for various government and non-profit agencies that serve vulnerable populations. Her topics include leadership, customer service, professional development, team building, diversity, violence prevention, and social service issues.*
